TIMES-VIRGINIAN

A. H. CLEMENT, Editor.

THURSDAY, OCT. 14, 1926

Congressman Tucker after speaking Tuesday to a large audience at Buckingham came over to Appomattox to attend the Fair and shake hands with a loyal constituency here. While here he was the guest of his cousin, Mrs. C. S. McDearman. He left Wednesday for his home in Lexington.

Local Questions

The State Commission now receiving suggestions at Richmond as to how the Constitution should be amended has had before it able and outstanding characters and suggestions which ought to help the next General Assembly in simplifying the many questions of economy and simplicity in our local and State Government.

We must endorse the suggested plan of Superintendent Hart of the State Board of Education when he urges that the county school board be elected by the people. The board, in turn, would choose the county superintendent from a list of eligibles submitted by the State Board of Education. As to the selection of county superintendents, we prefer the nomination by the County boards and confirmation by State Board.

He also advocated giving the State board supervision over all teachers' training schools, schools for the deaf and blind and industrial reform schools.

Dr. Douglas Freeman emphasized the need for giving the cities and towns greater freedom of action in their local affairs. He would have the Constitution read simply that the municipalities should enjoy such powers of government as were not forbidden by the Constitution and were approved by the General Assembly.

After all pains and deliberation with all conflicting interests do more with the Commission's report than it did with the admirable report of the Commission on simplification of State and Local Government?

Statement of the Ownership, Management, Circulation, Etc, Required by the Act of Congress of August 24, 1912

Of The Times-Virginian published weekly at Appomattox, Va., for Oct. 1, 1926.

STATE OF VIRGINIA

County of Appomattox, Va.

Before me a Notary Public, in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared A. H. Clement, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is the owner and editor of The Times-Virginian and that the following is, to the best of knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in sections 411, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to-wit:

1 That the name and address of the publisher, editor, and business manager is A. H. Clement, of Appomattox, Va.

2 That the owner is A. H. Clement, of Appomattox, Va.

3 That the known loudholders, morigages, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are none.

4 That the two paragraphs next above giving the name of the owners, stockholders, and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders, as they appear upon the books of the company but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiants full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than associated by him.

A. H. Clement, Owner.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 1st day of Oct. 1926.

(Seal) H W. McKinney,

My commission expires Mar. 6, 1928.

HUDSON, MELTING POT OF WORLD COMMERCE

Vessels From All Nations Enter That River.

New York.—The commerce of the world comes into the Hudson river, and about its mouth clusters unequaled activity.

It often has been compared to the Thames and the Seine, but neither of these is deep enough to care for the great liners which rest at uptown docks along the Hudson.

This activity even descends beneath the river for subway lines and railways have run cylindrical tubes far beneath its bed, so deep that the roar of passing trains is muffled in the depths.

For miles below Seventy-second street there is the commercial activity of a metropolis, and it continues even farther north, but from that juncture upstream there are two worlds.

The largest ocean liners, including the Leviathan, tie up at piers on the Hudson, while others accommodate the freighters from every land. There is a clamor and bustle different from other busy sections about these docks, and there also usually is a distinctive odor that marks the product of commerce handled on each freighter's pier.

Space is at a premium along the river's bank, whether for a business requiring a square or merely a piece to set a shanty. There are lumber yards, chandler's places, mechanic's shops, blacksmiths, garages and junk yards. The only order in this confusion is that necessary to keep one business from flowing over into another. But hardly ever does a ship sail late, or a cargo remain aboard too long.

Here the river is democratic, but above Seventy-second street there is more exclusiveness in its carriage.

Aristocratic Section.

The northern channel in the summer months usually is graced by naval vessels, trim in their gray paint and gayly decked with pennants. The river has a "tone" for about fifty blocks. White river boats arrive and depart and at intervals of ten or fifteen blocks are the anchorages for exclusive yacht clubs. Close to each clubhouse rest the motor boats. The dinghys hug the shore, the speed boats line up next, and then the cabin cruisers and the more ocean-going private craft with brass gleaming and paint fresh.

Here is where the river has two banks.

The lower one, skirting the edge of the water, is used by railway tracks, much of the land having been formed with dirt dredged from the channel. Freight trains drawn by switch engines shift back and forth between the docks and engines are transferred to continental trains.

High above this level is Riverside drive, or "The Drive," for it is the only one of its kind.

Schwab's Home Overlooks.

The foot of the street is marked by the most unfortunate house on the drive. It is the home of Charles M. Schwab occupying a large part of an iron-fenced square. Its trees and shrubbery forming a beautiful private park.

Continuing north there are other smaller houses, mostly ten or more years old, for the street has been given over almost entirely to large apartment structures.

Up and down, sometimes narrow sometimes wide, between these two levels runs Riverside park, a strip of green used principally by the children for a playground and where nurses wheel their charges.

It also is marked by two great structures, the Soldiers and Sailors' monument and Grant's tomb, the latter a mecca for sightseers. Famous statues of famous people there are, too among them being Gen. Franz Sigel and Joan of Arc.

And then its grandeur passes. The ferry slip at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street marks the line, although the change starts some blocks below.

NOW DRIVE THE CAR/

Only those who have driven a Dodge Brothers Special Sedan—or any Dodge Brothers car BUILT RECENTLY—can fully appreciate all that Dodge Brothers have accomplished during the past few months.

So swiftly has improvement followed improvement, that today the car, to all intents and purposes, is a different and incomparably finer vehicle.

The announcement of smart new body lines and attractive color combinations first attracted general favor. But since then, improvements even more fundamental have been accomplished mechanically.

Drive the car NOW! Observe its impressive new silence, smoothness and elasticity of performance, and you will then begin to realize just how vital and varied these and other later improvements actually are.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CARS

Over 3,000 cities and towns have streets paved with portland cement concrete

Horse-and-Buggy Pavements Won't Do

Property owners in many towns and cities whose streets swarm with motor traffic are still wasting their money on horse-and-buggy "pavements" of bygone days.

These rough, bumpy streets are directly responsible for broken springs, cut tires, greater depreciation of cars, physical discomfort, loss of time, and many accidents involving loss of life or limb.

And the heavy expense of trying to keep worn-out, dangerous, horse-and-buggy streets in repair, added to their original cost, amounts to more than enough to pay for true, even, non-skid concrete pavement that has the maintenance built in.

So in the long run you are paying for concrete streets. Why not get them?

All of the facts are in our free booklet on "Concrete Streets." Ask for your copy

Sepulcher on Cliff Awaits Builder's Body

Lexington, Ky.—On a jutting cliff of the Floyd county hills stands a concrete sepulcher, which for more than a decade has awaited the body of its owner—an eccentric Kentucky mountaineer, who knew that his body will be petrified by the action of the limestone in the hillside.

He is S. P. "Pogue" Ratliff, sixty-eight years old, of Wolf Creek, Floyd county, who had the tomb erected twelve years ago on the crest of a knoll back of his home, from which it is visible every time the owner steps into his back yard.

"I'll be laid in there on my right side," he explains—his right eye is sightless—"and my right hand will be under my head. There'll be no coffin—I'll just be laid in there as I am, garbed in a white shroud that I have figured will cost less than $1. Under my head will be a homespun coverlet. I expect my body to petrify, with time taking action upon it. But when the resurrection morning comes I hope to come forth just as you see me in this life, only with renewed vigor of youth."

Find Widows Prefer Single Men as Mates

Sacramento, Calif. — Gentlemen may prefer blonds, and then again they may not; but it can be stated positively, on the authority of the state board of health bureau of vital statistics, that widows prefer bachelors.

"Widows," says L. E. Rose, statistician of the bureau, who knows just how much business the marriage license clerks do each year and with whom, "show a very marked preference for single men."

Among widowers, on the other hand, single maidens are no more acceptable than widows when a second journey to the altar is contemplated, and either a widow or a single girl has a better chance of being proposed to by a widower than has a divorcee.

Joseph H. Garrett

This prosperous and progressive farmer died at his home Wednesday morning near Wildway. He was in town Monday and Tuesday and remarked that he was feeling better than he had been for some time. He walked out into the yard and when found he was dead. Heart trouble was the cause of his death. He was 65 years of age and a member of Mt Comfort Methodist church, and was a member of a large family, whose father lived in Buckingham county.

His remains will be interred at his late home this evening. He is survived by his wife and seven children as follows: Monroe L., Chas. H., J. Wiley, Percy A., and Mrs. J. W. Scruggs, Mrs. L. C. Hatcher and Mrs. Lawrence Hatcher, all of this county. Joe was a kind hearted, up-right citizen and had a host of friends who regret his sudden death.

Horrible Deaths

Strange and unaccountable deaths came to the home of Mr. Douglass Harris who resides near River View in this county since our last issue.

Mrs. Douglass Harris and her daughter Miss Emily died Saturday. Mrs Harris was in her 40th year and Miss Emily in her 17th. They were buried Sunday at Mt. Comfort church. Mrs. Harris was a daughter of the late Fletcher Burge and is survived by four children and her husband. Since Sunday two more of the girls have died and were buried this morning beside their mother and elder sister. They were Misses Frances and Ossie and were buried in the same grave at Mt. Comfort church.

On Sunday mother and Emily were buried side by side. Ruby the only daughter left is ill and not expected to live. The father is heart-broken and has the sympathy of every one.

Specialist have been called in, but they can not agree, it is said, on the cause of this affliction. Certainly it appears that the profession would make such further examinations and have further consultations until the course is established.

The bereavement and sympathy of our people for the afflicted family is pronounced.

KEEPING THE KIDS ON THE FARM

Out near Chickasaw, Okla., there's a little station—and by this time probably a post office—called Lyle. Nearby are three Lyle children on the 800-acre farm who show no enthusiasm for learning to become white-collared city folks. The story runs like this: There was a Tennessee farm boy who did things "just like dad" and stayed flat as poor as dad was. There was a girl, an orphan, who grew up being waited on in her sister's home. Then the girl's father asked her to join him on a Texas ranch. "It was 21 miles from town," she laughs in retrospect, "and I had to cook or starve, and keep a nice house or live in filth. By and by the boy and girl became Mr. and Mrs. Bob Lyle, and tried farming on a big scale in Oklahoma.

"But we liked to work our fool selves to death," recalls Bob. And, "nine months of the year I was kept busy feeding 20 farm hands and baling the hay crop," says his wife, "and when the bottom dropped out of the hay market, and the war took all our labor, we decided we'd let the hogs do the baling and save me the cooking."

At one time they made a record shipment of 26 cars, filled with 2,250 head of hogs. They brought $84,000 and the Lyles felt proud until they happened on a sale of pure bred hogs where 50 head sold for more than $27,000. Then and there the Lyles discarded all faith in old-fashioned methods. They substituted high-bred pigs and treated them with the consideration due to breeding. That they're succeeding financially is evidenced by the fact that three sales last year netted $75,000.

Mrs. Lyle is the business manager of the firm, carrying all correspondence, keeping the books, working up pedigrees (which for human folks had always fascinated her), and doing some clever advertising. At the fairs, where Lyle pigs are carrying off prizes, there's a funny booklet always for distribution. It is called "Pig Tales," and the long braids of hair on four girls spell out "Leave it to Lyle." Inside are scraps of Mr. Lyle's humorous philosophy turned into sales arguments.

And the little Lyles? Each one had a pure bred pig sold him or her on interest. At the end of the year they sold enough pork on the hoof to pay off their notes and start them in a business that at the end of five years, their mother estimates, should give each the equivalent of 8,000 pigs worth $75 each!
